Pamplin AARP to meet

The Pamplin Chapter of American Association of Retired Persons will hold their monthly meeting on Feb. 22 instead of Feb. 15 at the United Charge Methodist Church in Pamplin at noon.

The same program that had been planned for the previous week will take place.

Mr. Sam Waddell has been kind enough to change his schedule so that he can be present.

We are sorry that the bad weather forced us to make this change.

UNDERCLASSMEN AT Appomattox County High School who are in the county's Gifted and Talented program attended a seminar recently on "How to Choose a College." The seminar was conducted by Bonnie Clevenger, admissions counselor at Longwood College. She discussed various topics, such as self evaluation, college admissions tests and financial aid, the cost of attending college today, the importance of making a careful survey of possibilities when choosing a college, and the various types of institutions available to today's high school students.

Extra insurance possible for farms with good records

High yields and good records can pay off in increased crop insurance protection for many Appomattox County farmers, according to Mary E. Goodwyn, district director of Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

Goodwyn reports that a major change in the method of calculating insurance yield guarantee makes it possible for qualifying farmers to obtain additional coverage at no additional cost.

"Our goal is to offer each farmer a guaranteed yield that reflects his own yield experience. Thus, if a farmer can prove that his yields during the past three or more years have been above the average for his area, we'll also give him credit for above-average yields in any years for which he doesn't have the necessary records. Specifically," Goodwyn explains, "we'll assume his yields in those years were above average by the same percentage as his recent yields."

The insurance official states that the improved Individual Yield Coverage Program, as it is called, will make Federal Crop Insurance policies significantly more attractive than in the past to those farmers who have a history of high yields. "The fact that there's no increase in cost for the increased protection should also provide an incentive to carry insurance," he adds.

The ASCS office in Appomattox can provide interested farmers with information about the procedure for verifying above average yields. In addition, the ASCS office can provide a list of local private insurance agents who have obtained the required FCIC Certification to sell and service Federal Crop Insurance policies.

For 1983, the Individual Yield Coverage Program is open to Appomattox County farmers who produce barley, corn, grain sorghum and wheat. Insurance agents can explain exactly what coverage is available and what the protection would cost. To make the insurance affordable as possible, the Federal Government pays up to 30 percent of the premium cost.

Concord club receives honor

Nine local homemakers attended the 27th Annual State Convention of Young Homemakers of Virginia at the Hotel Roanoke in Roanoke, February 4-5, 1983.

The Concord Chapter of the Young Homemakers of Virginia was represented at the State Convention by Maureen Shupe, Helen Franklin, Frances Horning, Evelyn Carroll, Evelyn Perrow, Barbara Jordan, Mary Jo Booth, and Dale Hampton.

Also attending was chapter advisor Maude Braford, homemaking teacher at Rustburg High School.

The Concord Chapter of Young Homemakers of Virginia won second prize in the state for their safety programs. The Safety Award was a plaque, a certificate, and a check for fifty dollars awarded by the Virginia Farm Bureau.

The Annual Convention, held jointly with the Young Farmers of Virginia, is highlighted by the installation of state officers, the presentation of awards for outstanding chapter and individual accomplishments, and the presentation of the State Program of Work. The Program of Work outlines the area for educational programs and activities for the year. The Concord Chapter will meet to plan activities for the local area on February 16 at the home of Mrs. Maureen Shupe.

The Concord Chapter of the Young Homemakers of Virginia is the only Charter Chapter left in Virginia. The Concord Chapter was chartered in 1956 and still has two active charter members, Mrs. Evelyn Carroll and Mrs. Marie Perrow.

The Young Homemakers of Virginia is an adult education program sponsored by the Vocational Home Economics Education Service, State Department of Virginia, and the Campbell County School System.

Membership in the Young Homemakers of Virginia is open to anyone who is interested. The organization, which works toward enrichment of family life is made up of women and men of all ages and backgrounds. For more information on the Concord Chapter, contact the Concord Chapter President, Mrs. Maureen Shupe at 993-2171.

4-H Club News

Mrs. George's 4-H Club

Mrs. George's 4-H Club held its regular meeting in December. We learned how to make Christmas wreaths. Mrs. Walton taught us how to make these. They were braided circles with red bows at the bottom.

We also had our business meeting.

The meeting was then adjourned.

Mark your valuables

By OCIE M. MACK
Extension Agent

You as a consumer can protect your household goods by participating in Operation Identification, which is a method of marking the valuable items in the home so that they can be identified if stolen.

Most burglars sell what they steal, making it hard for the police to trace the items. Once it has left your home, a television or bicycle looks just like thousands of others. The police cannot return it unless you can prove it is your property.

Identify your property by doing the following:

-Borrow an electric engraving pen from a local law enforcement agency or buy an inexpensive diamond-tipped marking pen from a local store.

-Check with the local police or sheriff to learn the identification number recommended by authorities in Virginia. Then engrave the number on all valuable possessions such as televisions, radios, stereos, typewriters, golf clubs, appliances and tools. Mark any portable items that might be stolen.

-Photograph unmarkable items such as china, silver or jewelry.

-Make a complete inventory of household goods, including the serial numbers of the television sets and appliances and put the inventory, along with the photos, in a safe-deposit box.

If burglarized, the list can help with the police and insurance. If the goods are recovered, the pictures and serial numbers will help prove ownership and, if necessary, will aid in filing insurance claims.

-Check with your local law enforcement agency to see if they have operation identification stickers. If they do, get some stickers and put on the front window or door or in a clearly visible location. Make sure the property has been marked before the stickers are placed in the window.
